The ladies are all ministering angels, who are carefully watching after fallen man.

To-morrow, Saturday 2nd, is anniversary of Texas independence and a State holiday.

But for the watchfulness of woman, man would be a complete failure. It is to them the christianizing of the world is due.

No one blames "State Press" for so gallantly defending Madam Editors. It shows his chivalrous and gallant nature. It is evident he would not sit in a chair while a woman is standing. He is too intensely Southern to be any thing else but gallantry itself.

The JIMPLECUTE reproduces Hon. H. W. Grady's great speech at Dallas in October of 1888 in the interest of diversification of crops. Our farmer friends are urgently requested not only to read it, but put it away so as to refer to it. It is sound logic—good reading. Worthy of any man's careful consideration.

Hon. Morris Sheppard's plea for Cypress river was like all his speeches, unanswerable. It demonstrated one great truth, that he is putting in ALL of his time for the people by whom he is paid. Whenever it becomes necessary for him to divide his time with business on the outside, he will send in his resignation.

The investigation of Senator Bailey closed very abruptly, and in a manner which will reflect no credit on the State nor the party. It was the impression of the people that Senator Bailey wanted an unanimous exoneration—that is what the people thought he was fighting for. If he was innocent why did he not get such a report. It has the appearance of being any thing but unanimous. The JIMPLECUTE would rather the verdict had been unanimous, then every vestige of suspicion would have been gone, but the "exoneration" given him, comes with it much doubt. The doubt will live longer than many who have participated in the examination.

Special and careful attention is called to the editorial taken from the Shreveport Times. The Dallas News has a similar editorial of the same date but the JIMPLECUTE prefers presenting the one from a sister state, to show how others view the "exoneration" of the Senate by a bare majority of four. The Times cannot be charged with being unfair because they only have the general good of the democratic party in view. The action of the State Senate is unprecedented, unheard of. The nearest to it, was the seven and eight commission, which ignored everything, and put Hayes in over Tilden. It is time for a check to be called or the prestige and glory of the South will only be known in history—can the people afford this.

This is what the greatest man since the days of him who died on the cross, according to some, said: "I think I deserve great praise for not taking a shotgun and killing them, and all of them that is what I would have done. I would give my seat in the Senate tomorrow if I could settle with all of them at once." Don't this bombastic talk make decent people tired. No statesman would ever use any such language. If Mr. Bailey will designate a day when and where he wants to begin the extermination, doubtless he would find enough on hand to entertain him. They will perhaps be on hand more promptly than he responded to the retired army officer's card in the Washington paper after his grandstand play with Senator Beveridge.

Senator Bailey said: "I seriously want to say this: That neither this proposition of these charges, nor Crane, nor Cockrell nor any other man, who has ever assailed my personal integrity will be allowed to investigate me. I have allowed these men to talk about me in the papers and on the stump but no living man is going to stand to my face and insult me with these questions, and the committee had just as well know it." The people thought that a committee appointed by the legislature had the authority of a court to say who should and who should not propound questions. In this, it seems, they were mistaken. It would appear that if Senator Bailey should have to be arraigned before a district court he would dictate who should act as judge, or district attorney. Such bombastic talk is an insult to Texas. The committee were derelict in their duty by not permitting either Cockrell or Crane to ask the question. Innocence never objects to who may ask questions. Senator Bailey may demand another Attorney General to propound questions to him when the Waters Pierce Oil Co. trial comes up. You know he is saying who shall and who shall not. Surely a District Court has no more legal authority than a committee appointed by the Legislature. Yet he says who interrogate him, and the committee bows to his mandates gracefully. The people will understand this after a while, and when they do, something is coming off.

The Madril (I.T.) Democrat very truthfully says, "We all make some mistakes. The older we get, the more we realize this fact. He who says he does not, be he old or young, humble or mighty, has either a colossal deceit or an elastic conscience, and one is as bad as the other. Deliver us from the man who is always right and never in the wrong."

Rain and Hail Storm.

A dark cloud with most vivid sheet lightning came up about 6:30 p. m. Thursday from the west, and was followed by a heavy, driving rain, hail and wind. The hail fell thick in the west part of the city and about T. & P. depot but was lighter down in town, it rained heavily at 10 p. m., and again at 4:30 a. m. a heavy wind, hail, and rain swept over the business part of the city. The hail was of good size but not much damage was done but the rain washed the streets considerable. It turned off cooler after the storm.

February went out like a lion and March came in like one.

There will be a masquerade skating at the rink some night next week. Date will be given later.

One of Us.

In a recent number of a German magazine a writer offers a variant of a tale that has been published in a book of children's true sayings, which relates how two small girls tried to sit on one stool, and one of them wisely remarked, "If one of us was to get off this stool, there would be more room for me."

The Tentative version tells how a German sat by the bedside of his dying wife and murmured piously, "If it pleases the good God to take one of us, I shall go to Berlin."

Bailey's Vindication.

That was a very extraordinary thing that the Texas Senate did with reference to the charges against Senator Bailey. State Senators are small editions of the United States and the latter is called the most dignified deliberative body on earth. The Senate is supposed to be not only dignified but conservative, created for the purpose of acting as a check on the lower house. It is expected that it will be guided by reason rather than impulse, by logic rather than partiality.

Following the organization of the Texas legislature in January resolutions were introduced in both houses providing for an investigation into the charges preferred against Senator Bailey. Each house ordered the inquiry to be made and the committees were appointed for that purpose, with the result that a joint inquiry has been under way for the past several weeks. It is surprising, therefore, that the Senate should "exonerate" Senator Bailey in advance of any report from the Senate committee which was charged with the duty of conducting an investigation into the matters at issue. Isn't this rather a new way of disposing of legislative investigations? Suppose the United States Senate should "exonerate" the negro troops who are accused of "shoot ing up" the town of Brownsville before the Committee on Military Affairs, which is engaged in an exhaustive inquiry into the facts of the affair, submit its report? Senator Bailey would be among the first to protest against such a high-handed and unheard-of proceeding. Not only that, but the people of the country generally would regard such a result as farcical in the extreme.

However, the action taken by the Texas Senate was nothing more than might have been expected in view of the loose manner in which the alleged investigation was conducted. The two committees appointed for that purpose early manifested a reluctance to do anything that might be calculated to hurt the sensitive feelings of Mr. Bailey. The accused used the most abusive language toward those who considered his enemies exhibiting not the least respect for the tribunal before which he was being tried. He brow beat witnesses and denounced them in most vulgar and ungentlemanly terms, and the joint committee sat by without a word of protest or any effort to command that the man under accusation should respect it.

There has been scarcely any doubt what sort of report the joint committee would make, it is true. Judging from the manner in which the investigation was conducted, these committees appeared to have been created for the purpose of vindicting the junior Senator from Texas. Still, the Senate might have had the decency to wait until the findings were reported.

It doesn't matter, after all, what Texas does to Bailey. He stands discredited before the country and his infidelity with the party which honored him but which have vanished never to return.—Shreveport Times, Feb. 27.

Jefferson's Reputation Abroad.

In last week's JIMPLECUTE the position was taken that whenever a homicide was committed it was but the effect of evil causes working upon the animal nature in somebody. Sometimes it is the effect of evil causes upon the person doing the killing and often it is the result of such causes existing with reference to any particular homicide alleged to have been committed here, is not for the writer to say. We go no further than the assertion that no intentional homicide is committed without somebody being to blame.

It is our purpose this week to point out some of the evil influences operating in our town that are the primary causes of most of our trouble. This is done in the hope that our citizens will be as wise as the physician by getting rid of the effect by removing the cause.

Many and varied have been the prophecies as to the purpose of these articles. It has been suggested that it is but the forerunner of a prohibition election. The writer had not thought of prohibition as a remedy but if prohibition is a remedy let it come anything to save our town, and greater than all, anything that will save our homes.

Now to the point as to what it is that is corrupting the morals of many of our citizens and developing in them the animal at the expense of their better nature. It is the private opinion of this writer that "bad booze" has much to do with the downward moral tendencies. We have yet to hear the first man defend "booze" from a moral standpoint. The man who contends that liquor develops morally and crushes out and stifles his immoral passions is yet to be heard from. Records and statistics tell us that as a direct result of an immoderate use of intoxicating liquors there is an annual output in our fair United States of 800,000 paupers, 315,000 criminals, and 75,000 lunatics. If these facts are true, if the midnight wail of the abused wife, the hushed sob of starving children, accompanied by the heartless guffaw of the brutalized husband are attributable to the dispensation of intoxicating liquors, it is the opinion of this writer that no economic question should so reduce the estimate of good morals and civic righteousness in the minds of the people that this business should sit upon the throne of public sentiment and national support and mock in silence its own victims of misery and death. If the influence of liquor upon the morals of our sons and daughters, husband and fathers is bad can we expect a high moral development among our citizens in a town of less than 3,000 that support nine places where intoxicants are dispensed?

Now, whatever may be the influence of liquor as such, we are of the opinion that there exists among our citizens a really honest to the mud sills of society than the liquor business. Whether these evils are inseparably connected with the business the writer is unprepared to say. But this we say unhesitatingly, that in no town of less than 3,000 inhabitants where low dives are allowed, where women of ill-fame gather and conduct themselves in a lewd and lascivious manner, and indecent, vulgar, and obscene pictures are allowed to hang upon the walls, can long boast of a moral people. This is a strike at the very foundation of society, to wit: the proper estimate and premium placed upon pure womanhood. The morals and virtue of any town or locality will rise no higher than the standard of virtue set by the men of that town or locality, for their women, and when our young men are in constant contact with these "mud sills" of society, "lepers of society," and see to what depths of depravity they are capable of going, they are likely to place an unsafe estimate upon pure womanhood. Take a young man who is the pride of a mother's heart, inflame every animal passion within him being with bad whiskey, place him in a low dive where every virtue he has been taught to admire in his mother, is prostituted by women of lowest degree, let him rest upon the picture of a woman clothed with no raiment save the atmosphere, and
